Report from Antigua—A case of smallpox on British mail steamship Solent—Quarantine proclamation.

Consul Estes reports, March 25, as follows: While smallpox has been quite prevalent in several of the islands, especially Barbados and Trinidad, so far this island has apparently been free from the disease, and the greatest precautions are being taken to keep it out. The Royal Mail steamer Solent, which came from England last week via Trinidad, Barbados, and the other islands, as far north as the Danish island of St. Thomas, is now on her return trip, touching at Antigua last night. While between St. Thomas and St. Kitts a suspicious
